

Mission Statement

The mission of the Claflin University Conference on Languages and Cultural Studies is to provide a robust interdisciplinary forum for scholars and practitioners across the humanities and social sciences. Recognizing that language is the primary lens through which we interpret cultural, social, and political realities, the conference fosters a collaborative dialogue on the complexities of postsecondary education. We are dedicated to exploring how linguistic fluency and cultural literacy intersect to shape critical thinking, social equity, and global citizenship in an increasingly interconnected academic landscape.